Earl “Tex” Clark September 18, 1995

42-year-old Earl Clark was reported missing by his wife Nancy. He is reported to have been depressed and possibly suicidal, and in possession of a 38 caliber pistol. Nancy has since become uncooperative in the investigation, maintaining that Mr. Clark is still alive and that she has seen him in Denver as recent as August of 2008. She stated that Mr. Clark moved to Australia, but this has been discounted. A silver 1989 Toyota pickup truck owned by Nancy Clark and driven by Mr. Clark was involved in an accident in Globe, Arizona. The driver, Dwayne Arvid Schmidt, a fugitive from South Dakota, was arrested and questioned concerning the whereabouts of Mr. Clark and how he obtained access to the vehicle. Mr. Schmidt invoked his rights and refused to cooperate. Mr. Schmidt has since passed away. Authorities are still working on obtaining reference samples from the family members of Mr. Clark in Nebraska and Minnesota.

July 11, 2011

This middle-aged African American female checked in to a local motel on June 27, 2011 and arrived there by taxi. She paid for a room in cash through July 11, 2011. It was later found that she had stayed at other local motels in the area, always taking a taxi, paying in cash, and giving false and different names. She told the Motel 9 that her name was Sandra Nelson, of 5203 Bosa Ave., Park City, Utah. This was later found to be a non-existent address and false name. She also stated that she was originally from Los Angeles and was looking for a house in this area. On July 11, 2011, she did not show up for breakfast as had been her custom. Since it was her last paid day, staff assumed she had checked out. They entered her room with a master key and found her deceased on the bed with pills at her feet and a bright blue, granular purging coming from her nose and mouth. There was no suicide note but autopsy results showed a massive overdose of multiple medications and case was ruled as a suicide. Luggage and other items were found in the room but all identifiers had been meticulously eliminated before death. All attempts to identify the decedent have failed.

John Doe

September 8, 2004

The victim was located September 8, 2004 by bow hunters in a remote area north of Glenwood Springs. The site is in the drainage of No Name Creek at about 9,700 feet elevation, about 6 miles as the crow flies from Glenwood Springs, but 12 miles by the Transfer Trail out of town. The skeleton revealed no cause of death and the sheriff's office has been assuming it was probably natural. The man was found in a tent at a campsite in a wooded, remote location. His trousers had rotted away, but the date of currency found at his campsite indicates he apparently had been there no longer than five years. The letter leaves open the possibility the man was suicidal, although there is no reason to believe he killed himself. Perhaps he was terminally ill and chose to take his life. The man also could have succumbed to unexpected illness or injury while on an outing in the Flat Tops. Much about the case is conjecture, including a theory that the man entered the Flat Tops Wilderness at a trailhead on the north and hiked four or five days across elevations of 11,000 feet before setting up his tent on a southern drainage at about 9,700 feet. That theory is supported by two moisture-proof National Geographic trail maps of the Flat Tops with a route drawn across them to the area where the remains were discovered. But it is possible the man picked up the maps someone else had marked and left behind.

The victim was apparently living a transient lifestyle. He was found deceased in the boxcar of a train in a railroad yard in north Fort Collins. He had sustained massive blunt trauma injuries to the head, consistent with being caught in the slamming door of the boxcar of an abruptly stopping train. The manner of death appears to be accidental. The train in which he was found arrived in Denver from New Mexico on September 15, 1994 and was forwarded on to Fort Collins at 2:00 a.m., September 16, 1994. Clothing: blue nylon windbreaker with logo ATA Services, Mile High Stadium; a gray/white plaid shirt; a red long-sleeved sweatshirt; khaki trousers and black/white canvas and vinyl athletic shoes. "Chana y Gris" was written in block letters on the thigh of his pants. A religious pamphlet from Jeremiah Baptist Church, Denver was found in a pocket.

Body was found in the sleeper cab of a deserted semi-trailer truck which had been sitting in an industrial part of north Ft. Collins. Autopsy revealed no evidence of trauma or foul play; the bondage and partial undress of the deceased suggests some sort of sexual game was going on when he expired. It is theorized that death may have been due to a cardiac electromechanical event, perhaps as the result of using some illicit inhalant, such as amyl nitrate. The overall appearance of the deceased suggests he may have been homosexual. The manner of death cannot exclude homicide, natural, or accidental causes. *Height of 5'10" is an estimate.

John Doe

October 14, 2000

The victim was located on the prairie about a mile north of the Walking Stick housing development, north of Pueblo. He was possibly mentally ill and was either released or walked away from a mental hospital. A witness told investigators he encountered a man camping on the open range in August 2000. According to the witness, the man said he was from Albuquerque, and was working his way to Denver. The man had dreadlocks in his hair that were about 4 to 6 inches long. The transient was told he could not stay on the land and would have to move.

Apparently, the man moved, but only about a half mile. On October 14, 2000, a woman on horseback came across a camp where the skeletal remains of a man were found reclining on a sleeping bag. Also at the camp area was a tent that had not been pitched, a second sleeping bag, several canteens and several changes of clothing.

The decedent did not have identification on him. A few pieces of paper were with the decedent, one contained typed telephone numbers for Spanish Peaks Mental Health Centers and another had addresses of homeless shelters in the Denver area. The clothing and remains were studied carefully for any signs of foul play - knife or bullet holes in the clothing, broken bones, skull fractures. None were found.
